

In regions with very less or no supply of raw milk, or during shortage of milk supply, milk is reconstructed or recombined and used as substitute for raw milk. Recombined milk is milk produced by adding water to milk powder and/or milk fats. Pietribiasi produces mixing plants of all sizes and automation levels, for reconstituted or recombined milk to be sent to the downstream processing line to drinking milk or fermented products.